FOREST: Los Padres National Forest encompasses approximately 1.75 million acres of central California's scenic coastal mountain ranges. The forest stretches across almost 220 miles from north to south and consists of two separate land divisions. The northern division is comprised of the very unique Big Sur coastal range descending steeply to the ocean on the west and to the Salinas Valley on the east. It is within Monterey County and northern San Luis Obispo County. The "main division" is unique in being a transverse east-west coastal range divided by the Sierra Madre Ridge and draining to the ocean on the south and to the Cuyama valley to the north. It includes lands within San Luis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Ventura and Kern Counties.

Santa Barbara Ranger District:

The Santa Barbara Ranger District has various recreational opportunities for day use, developed camping, river access, hunting, recreational shooting, hiking and backpacking, fishing, mountain biking, off-highway vehicles and horseback riding. The District has the most developed and concentrated recreation area on the forest, the Santa Ynez Recreation Area, and it is managed through a concessionaire permit. The district also has a large recreational residence tract and administers many other recreation special use permits. The District has many lands special use permits including those for communication sites and water. The District is responsible for management of portions of the San Rafael and Dick Smith Wildernesses. The District, in conjunction with the City and County of Santa Barbara, manages numerous front country trails that cross all three jurisdictions. Many District recreation programs and some resource programs are heavily supported through volunteer coordination.

The District is home to numerous threatened and endangered species and has a high concentration of cultural sites that can be impacted by forest uses such as recreation, special uses, and fire suppression. The District manages the urban interface with the south coast communities of Goleta, Santa Barbara, Montecito and Carpinteria as well as the watershed for several drinking water reservoirs for these communities. Fire prevention, including work with the local communities and the Fire Safe Council, fuels treatments, fire suppression, and BAER efforts make up a large part of the district's program of work. The District cooperates with numerous city and county fire departments to provide fire response to the urban interface area. The District's large fire organization includes 6 engines, LP Hotshots, Santa Ynez Helitack Crew, a dozer, fire prevention techs, 2 Battalion Chiefs, and a Division Chief. The fire staff makes up over 100 of the approximately 120 positions on the District.
